

TEST YOUR KNOWLEDGE

1. The lower part of the face and nose of a rabbit is called?
2. The length of the Angora fiber or wool is called what?
3. As a means of marking their territory, rabbits secrete this from the chin glands and anal gland?
4. To produce good firm pellets that reduce the amount of fines in the feed, this substance is added to feed?
5. High levels of this causes damage to the cells of the nasal passages that allows bacteria to colonize there?
6. A tail that is hard and brittle from a loss of circulation is called what?
7. Some lop breeds have a ridge of cartilage that forms the ear base. This is called what?
8. Shadow bars would be found on what part of the rabbit?
9. When building all wire cages, what gauge of galvanized wire should be used for the floor?
10. Protein supplements are sometimes added to rabbit feeds. What supplement is generally used?
11. Palpation will be more accurate with less danger of injury if done about how many weeks after mating?
12. How many incisor teeth do rabbits have?
13. What is the term used for a coat that has missing guard hairs exposing the undercoat?
14. When talking about the blaze, undercut, stops and saddle you would be judging what breed of rabbit?
15. What is the best way to prevent or control high humidity in your rabbitry?

Answers available on the MSRBA website.

www.msrb.net